CHANNEL WHARF BUSINESS.

and he feared he would be a poor member. He suggested that men be engaged at once, so as to go into quarantine and be ready to go upon the wharf whenever it was completed, which he was informed would be in about two weeks.

Mr. Swanzy suggested that the committee select suitable men for the work.
The committee was sufficiently numerous to direct the work, but its members were not expected to do any work themselves—such as keeping accounts, recording goods received and delivered, etc.

Mr. Giffard observed that no member of the committee had time to attend to the ordering of supplies of food, etc., or to run down to Kakaako on every complaint, or hold conferences there with the superintendent through a grating.

Mr. Swanzy asserted that such was precisely what he had been contending for. The committee men should, however, be ready to give advice to the superintendent or others doing the work. They might select the men for the service. He did not mean to have a new committee, but had no objection to an addition to its numbers.

President Walker had understood that Mr. Giffard's idea was that the chairman of committee should be someone who could devote some time to the business.

Mr. Auerbach suggested a paid official.

President Walker thought some large shipping house might have a man conversant with shipping matters who could be engaged.

Mr. Giffard recommended a committee of five from shipping houses to have executive and advisory functions.

Mr. Atherton agreed with this proposition, and went over a list of officials required, including a commissary general.

President Walker named several as efficient men connected with different firms.

Mr. Auerbach moved for a committee of five according to the suggestions just heard. Later, when the subject had been thrashed out by Messrs.
Hackfeld, Walker, Ena, Giffard, Atherton and Wight, Mr. Auerbach accepted the following amendment offered by Mr. Swanzy, seconding it as the main motion, which was carried unanimously.

"That the following firms and companies, namely—H. Hackfeld & Co., Ltd., Castle & Cooke, Ltd., C. Brewer
& Co., Ltd., W. G. Irwin & Co., Ltd., Schaefer & Co., Ltd., Alexander &
Baldwin, and Theo. H. Davies & Co., Ltd.—be appointed a committee for the purpose of carrying on the business of the quarantine wharf and warehouse, each of the said firms or companies to have the power of naming one of its members or directors to act for it on said committee. The committee to have the power of appointing its own chairman and such sub-committee or sub-committees as may be necessary for conducting its work, of engaging such paid assistance as may be required, and of transacting all business and making all disbursements and collections connected with the quarantine wharf and warehouse."

It had early been proposed to allot one representative to the two inter-island steamship companies, but Mr.
Ena with the assent of Mr. Wight waived this privilege, on the ground that the companies would each require a man constantly on the wharf, which would be all the representation they needed.

Secretary Spencer reported contributions amounting to $277 from all the members of the Chamber, excepting two who could not be reached, for the General Lawton's widow's fund.
The amount voted was $250 and, after payment of charges of remittance to General Shafter, there was a surplus of $25.30, for the disposal of which the secretary asked instructions. It was voted to put the surplus in the treasury.

Amendments to the bylaws were passed, relative to the calling of special meetings and providing for the election of a temporary chairman when both the president and vice president are absent.

Adjourned at 3:35.
